

Jeannie Patton, LANDFIRE Communications Lead

Jeannie joined The Nature Conservancy in 2004 when she was hired to manage outreach and training activities for the Global Fire Initiative and the LANDFIRE Project. At the University of Colorado, just prior to joining TNC, she provided administrative and communications support to the Natural Resources Law Center and was the Assistant to the Dean of the School of Law.

She has enjoyed a rich communications career as a journalist; magazine, web, and newspaper feature writer; marketing and public relations specialist; technical manuscript editor; and college-level instructor of journalism, composition, research, and literature.

Jeannie manages and writes for LANDFIRE's internal and external websites, develops communications and outreach projects, provides program administration, and is an overly enthusiastic copy editor. She earned her M.A. in Literature at the University of Northern Colorado and lives at the foot of the Rocky Mountains in Lafayette, CO.
